

SYSTEM AND METHOD FOR SECURE ON THE FLY HOME HEALTH CARE RECORDS MANIPULATION

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A site computer includes a database for manipulating and handling health care records. A communication device, coupled to the site computer and the database, receives commands, which are provided to the site computer and the database to perform various functions, including creating, displaying, modifying, and initiating organization of the health care records. The health records can be automatically transmitted to interested persons upon creation of the health records. Upon detection of the occurrence of threshold events as indicated in the health records, the site computer automatically transmits notifications to interested persons.
